MEMBER PROFILE: LYZETTE WALLACE

Lyzette Wallace (A.B., Political Science, 1990) credits her Stanford experience for not only teaching her how to think out-of-the-box, but also reminding her to dream big and live her dreams. Lyzette is currently a practicing attorney in Washington, D.C. — her firm's offices are on Pennsylvania Avenue NW, literally one block away from the White House — and is undefeated in the courtroom, even though she is no longer a trial attorney. Notwithstanding her current job responsibilities, Lyzette continues to dream big and is in the process of benchmarking for a business venture she intends to launch in the next 6-8 months involving issues of inclusion in the private, public, and government sectors. In addition to being a WDCSA member, Lyzette is also a past President of the Stanford Black Alumni Association, D.C. Chapter (SBAA-DC) where she continues to be quite active.
